ANDREW J. PECK, United States Magistrate Judge:

Pro se petitioner Willie Brown has petitioned under 28 U.S.C. § 2255 to vacate, set aside, or correct his sentence of 260 months imprisonment. (See 08 Civ. 8804, Dkt. No.1: Pet.) Brown asserts that: (1) "Ineffective Counsels' fundamental, prejudicial, gross negligence & Conflictive Cumulative Errors violated [his] rights" (Pet. ¶¶ 12(A)); (2) "Vindictive Prosecut[orial] Misconduct" involving "'spill over'" prejudice rendered "his sentence illegal & unfair" (Pet. ¶ 12(B)); and (3) the incorrect offense level was applied in calculating the sentencing guidelines in Brown's pre-sentence report (Pet. ¶ 12(C)). In a supplement to his petition, Brown also asserts that counsel was ineffective for permitting his sentences to be consecutive rather than concurrent. (04 Cr. 113, Dkt. Nos. 108-09: Brown Rule 15 Motion to Amend Pet.)

The parties have consented to decision of this petition by a Magistrate Judge pursuant to 28 U.S.C. § 636(c). (08 Civ. 8804, Dkt. No. 8.)

For the reasons set forth below, Brown's petition is DENIED.

FACTS

On February 5, 2004, Willie Brown was indicted along with two co-defendants. (04 Cr. 113, Dkt. No. 106: Gov't Ltr. Br. at 1.) On February 14, 2006, Brown waived indictment and was charged in a two-count superseding information. (Gov't. Br. at 1; 04 Cr. 113, Dkt. No. 71: 2/14/06 Waiver of Indictment; 04 Cr. 113, Dkt. No. 72: 2/14/06 S5 Superseding Information.) Count One charged Brown with distributing and possessing with intent to distribute five kilograms and more of cocaine from 1999 through February 2004; Count Two charged Brown with possessing a firearm in connection with a drug trafficking crime. (S5 Superseding Information.)

Guilty Plea and Sentencing

On February 16, 2006, represented by Donald Yanella, Brown pled guilty before Judge Cote. (04 Cr. 113, Dkt. No. 75: 2/16/06 Plea Transcript ["P."].) Brown acknowledged that he understood that he was waiving his rights to a jury trial and related rights. (P. 4-7.) Judge Cote described the specific crimes charged in the indictment, and Brown acknowledged that he understood both charges and the penalties for those charges, including that the five year mandatory minimum for Count Two must follow any sentence for Count One. (P. 8-10.) Brown affirmed that he had discussed the Sentencing Guidelines with his attorney and understood them (P. 10-11), after which the following colloquy occurred:

THE COURT: Now, do you understand that if your attorney or anyone has attempted to predict to you what your sentence will be that their [prediction] could be wrong; do you understand that?

THE DEFENDANT: Yes, your Honor.

THE COURT: No one, not your lawyer, not the government's lawyer, no one can give you any assurance of what your sentence will be because I am going to decide your sentence . . . [after] a presentence report [is] prepared. . . . Do you understand that?

THE DEFENDANT: Yes, your Honor.

THE COURT: . . . Even if your sentence is different from what your attorney or anyone else has told you it might be, even if it's different from what's calculated in an agreement you have with the government you are still going to be bound by your plea of guilty and cannot withdraw your plea of guilty. Do you understand that?

THE DEFENDANT: Yes, your Honor.

THE COURT: Has anyone threatened you[] or influenced or forced you in any way to plead guilty?

THE DEFENDANT: No your Honor.

(P. 11-12.) Brown stated that he had read the plea agreement, that his "lawyer went over it with" him, and that he understood it. (P. 12-13.) Brown acknowledged that in signing the plea agreement he agreed not to "appeal or litigate or challenge [his] sentence" as long as the Court did not sentence him "to more than 387 months in prison." (P. 13-14.) The following was the lengthy colloquy on the sentencing appeal waiver:

THE COURT: Do you understand that in this document you and the government have agreed that the sentencing guidelines range is 262 to 327 months imprisonment before we get to the five year sentence on the firearms count? Do you understand that that's what you've agreed to?

THE DEFENDANT: Yes, ma'am.

THE COURT: And you've also agreed that that five year sentence on the firearms count is to follow any sentencing guidelines range as a result of the cocaine charge; do you understand that?

THE DEFENDANT: Yes.

THE COURT: And you understand that in signing this you have agreed that a sentence within that range to be followed by the five year sentence on the firearms count would be a reasonable sentence for you; do you understand that's what you've agreed to?

THE DEFENDANT: Yes, your Honor.

THE COURT: Do you understand that you've also agreed in signing this that you will not appeal or litigate or challenge your sentence so long as I don't sentence you to more than 387 months in prison. Do you understand that that's what you've agreed to?

THE DEFENDANT: Yes, your Honor.

(P. 13-14.) Defense counsel noted that the quantity of narcotics in the S.D.N.Y. case "overlap[ped]" with the quantity to which Brown already had pled guilty to distributing in a case in federal court in Georgia (P. 14), and Judge Cote noted that Brown's right to argue that at sentencing was preserved (P. 14).

Brown admitted that he sold five kilograms and more of cocaine in the Bronx from 1999 to 2004 and that he possessed a firearm to assist in his drug distribution activity. (P. 15.) Brown stated that he knew at the time he committed them that his actions were illegal and wrong.

(P. 15-16.) Judge Cote entered a judgment of guilty on both counts, and set a date for sentencing. (P. 16-17.)

Brown's case was reassigned to Judge Owen on January 30, 2007. (04 Cr. 113, Dkt. No. 86: 1/30/07 Notice of Case Reassignment.) Sentencing occurred before Judge Owen on October 24, 2007. (04 Cr. 113, Dkt. No. 104: 10/24/07 Sentencing Transcript ["S."]) B. Alan Seidler,

Brown's counsel, noted that Brown's sentence in Georgia was reduced because of his cooperation, but not as much as the defense would have liked, and that his overall sentence would have been much lower if the same drugs did not lead to prosecutions in two different districts. (S. 2-4.) Brown's counsel also argued that Brown was 62 years old and in poor health, and still had approximately eight years remaining on his Georgia sentence. (S. 6-7.) Assistant United States Attorney David M. Rody responded that Brown had trafficked "a whole lot of drugs for a lot of years." (S. 7.) A.U.S.A. Rody noted that a woman had been "absolutely brutally butchered" in Brown's "stash" apartment, although Brown had nothing to do with that murder. (S. 8-9.) Brown addressed Judge Owen, stating that he "made a mistake, a big mistake, and [he] realize[d] [he] made a mistake." (S. 4.)

Because of Brown's age and poor health, Judge Owen departed below the sentencing guidelines range and the pre-sentence report recommendations, sentencing Brown to two hundred months for Count One (concurrent with the Georgia sentence) and the mandatory consecutive sixty months for the weapon charged in Count Two, for a total sentence of 260 months. (S. 14-16; see 04 Cr. 113, Dkt. No. 103: Judgment at 2.) A.U.S.A. Rody pointed out that on "page 4 of Mr. Brown's plea agreement dated February 9, 2006, there is a waiver provision which says that he will not appeal a sentence within or below the range of 322 to 387 months, and obviously the sentence [Judge Owen] has imposed is below that range." (S. 17.) Neither Brown nor his counsel responded to that comment. (S. 17-19.)

Brown's Petition for Habeas Corpus

Brown's petition under 28 U.S.C. § 2255 to vacate, set aside, or correct his sentence of 260 months (08 Civ. 8804, Dkt. No. 1: Pet.) asserts that: (1) "Ineffective Counsels' fundamental, prejudicial, gross negligence & Conflictive Cumulative Errors violated [his] rights" at both his plea hearing and at sentencing (Pet. ¶ 12(A)); (2) "Vindictive Prosecut[orial] Misconduct" involving "spill over" prejudice rendered "his sentence illegal & unfair" (Pet. ¶ 12(B));<sup>1/</sup> and (3) the incorrect offense level was applied in calculating the sentencing guidelines in Brown's pre-sentence report (Pet. ¶ 12(C)). (Pet. at 5.) In addition, Brown requested appointment of counsel. (Pet. ¶ 12(D).) Moreover, in a supplement to his petition, Brown asserts that counsel was ineffective for allowing his sentence to be consecutive rather than concurrent. (04 Cr. 113, Dkt. Nos. 108-09: Brown Rule 15 Motion to Amend Pet.)

ANALYSIS

I. BROWN'S ABILITY TO ASSERT A § 2255 PETITION IS BARRED BY HIS PLEA AGREEMENT, EXCEPT AS TO INEFFECTIVE ASSISTANCE OF COUNSEL AS TO HIS PLEA

---

Pursuant to his plea agreement, confirmed during his plea allocution, Brown waived his right to appeal or to collaterally or otherwise challenge any sentence which did not exceed the agreed-upon sentencing guidelines range. (See page 3 above.) The Second Circuit has held that

<sup>1/</sup> Brown argues that "the Government and the Court relied on 'spillover' material from another case where 'alleged' non-existing evidence was introduced that would otherwise be inadmissible," in reference to A.U.S.A. Rody's mentioning at sentencing that a murder was committed at Brown's stash house. (08 Civ. 8804, Dkt. No. 1: Brown Br. at 13, 15.)

"[w]here the record clearly demonstrates that the defendant's waiver of [his] right to appeal a sentence within an agreed Guidelines range was knowing and voluntary, that waiver is enforceable."

Monzon, 359 F. 3d 110, 116 (2d Cir. 2004).<sup>2/</sup> In addition, the Second Circuit has held that "[t]here is no general bar to a waiver of collateral attack rights in a plea agreement." Determining that plea agreement waivers of § 2255 rights are generally enforceable, however, does not end the inquiry. The Second Circuit has held that "a waiver of appellate or collateral attack rights does not foreclose an attack on the validity of the process by which the waiver

Accordingly, Brown's claims of vindictive prosecutorial misconduct, incorrect offense level, and alleged ineffectiveness of his sentencing counsel as to consecutive rather than concurrent sentences (see pages 1, 6 above) all are barred by his plea agreement to waive collateral attack of a below guideline sentence. The Court turns to Brown's sole surviving claim, ineffective assistance of counsel pre-plea, to see if it comes within the exception to the waiver.

II. BROWN'S CLAIMS OF INEFFECTIVE ASSISTANCE OF COUNSEL IN CONNECTION WITH HIS GUILTY PLEA ARE WITHOUT MERIT

A. Legal Principles Governing Guilty Pleas

Constitutional due process requires that a guilty plea be voluntary, knowing and intelligent. E.g., Bradshaw v. Stumpf, 545 U.S. 175, 183, 125 S. Ct. 2398, 2405 (2005); United States v. Ruiz, 536 U.S. 622, 629, 122 S. Ct. 2450, 2455 (2002); Bousley v. United States, 523 U.S. 614, 618, 118 S. Ct. 1604, 1609 (1998); Mabry v. Johnson, 467 U.S. 504, 508, 104 S. Ct. 2543, 2546-47 (1984); Brady v. United States, 397 U.S. 742, 748, 90 S. Ct. 1463, 1469 (1970); Boykin v. Alabama, 395 U.S. 238, 242-43 & n.5, 89 S. Ct. 1709, 1711-12 & n.5 (1969).<sup>5/</sup>

B. The Strickland v. Washington Standard on Ineffective Assistance of Counsel

In Strickland v. Washington, 466 U.S. 668, 104 S. Ct. 2052 (1984), the Supreme Court announced a two-part test to determine if counsel's assistance was ineffective: "First, the defendant must show that counsel's performance was deficient. This requires showing that counsel made errors so serious that counsel was not functioning as the 'counsel' guaranteed the defendant by the Sixth Amendment." Id. at 687, 104 S. Ct. at 2064.<sup>10/</sup> This performance is to be judged by an objective standard of reasonableness. Strickland v. Washington, 466 U.S. at 688, 104 S. Ct. at 2064.<sup>11/</sup>

Judicial scrutiny of counsel's performance must be highly deferential. It is all too tempting for a defendant to second-guess counsel's assistance after conviction . . . . A fair assessment of attorney performance requires that every effort be made to eliminate the distorting effects of hindsight, to reconstruct the circumstances of counsel's challenged conduct, and to evaluate the conduct from counsel's perspective at the time . . . . [A] court must indulge a strong presumption that counsel's conduct falls within the wide range of reasonable professional assistance; that is, the defendant must overcome the presumption that, under the circumstances, the challenged action "might be considered sound trial strategy."

The Supreme Court has counseled that these principles "do not establish mechanical rules." Strickland v. Washington, 466 U.S. at 696, 104 S. Ct. at 2069. The focus of the inquiry should be on the fundamental fairness of the trial and whether, despite the strong presumption of reliability, the result is unreliable because of a breakdown of the adversarial process. Any counsel errors must be considered in the "aggregate" rather than in isolation, as the Supreme Court has directed courts "to look at the 'totality of the evidence before the judge or jury.'" Lindstadt v. Keane, 239 F.3d 191, 199 (2d Cir. 2001) (quoting Strickland v. Washington, 466 U.S. at 695-96, 104 S. Ct. at 2069); accord, e.g., Rodriguez v. Hoke, 928 F.2d 534, 538 (2d Cir. 1991).

The Supreme Court also made clear that "there is no reason for a court deciding an ineffective assistance claim . . . to address both components of the inquiry if the defendant makes an insufficient showing on one." Strickland v. Washington, 466 U.S. at 697, 104 S. Ct. at 2069.<sup>14/</sup>

In addition, the Supreme Court has counseled that "strategic choices made after thorough investigation of law and facts relevant to plausible options are virtually unchallengeable; and strategic choices made after less than complete investigation are reasonable precisely to the extent that reasonable professional judgments support the limitations on investigation. . . . In any ineffectiveness case, a particular decision not to investigate must be directly assessed for

C. Application of These Standards to Brown's Claims

Brown claims that his guilty plea was "involuntary and unintelligently induced and entered" into because of ineffective assistance of counsel, specifically, that: (1) his attorney Donald Yanella told him that if he did not plead guilty, the prosecutor would contact the Georgia prosecutor to not authorize a downward departure motion already agreed upon there, and (2) Yanella failed to advise Brown that the mandatory consecutive sixty month sentence on Count Two would not begin to run until after Brown completed his sentence in Georgia. (Dkt. No. 1: Brown Br. at 6-7.) Brown also asserts that Yanella was ineffective with respect to the gun charge because "at no time did [Brown] possess[] a gun and that at no time did the government confiscate a gun to support the charge." (04 Cr. 113, Dkt. No. 112: Brown Traverse at 1-2.)

These claims are contradicted by Brown's sworn statements at his plea allocution, which, as noted above, "carry a strong presumption of verity and constitute a formidable barrier in any subsequent collateral proceeding." Marcelin v. Garvin, 97 Civ. 2996, 1999 WL 977221 at *7

<sup>17/</sup> Accord, e.g., United States v. Doe, 537 F.3d at 214; United States v. Arteca, 411 F.3d at 320; United States v. Garcia, 57 Fed. Appx. 486, 489 (2d Cir.), cert. denied, 538 U.S. 992, 123 S. Ct. 1815 (2003); United States v. Couto, 311 F.3d at 187; United States v. Coffin, 76 F.3d 494, 498 (2d Cir.), cert. denied, 517 U.S. 1147, 116 S. Ct. 1445 (1996); Tate v. Wood, 963 F.2d 20, 26 (2d Cir. 1992); Ventura v. Meachum, 957 F.2d 1048, 1058 (2d Cir. 1992); Panuccio v. Kelly, 927 F.2d 106, 108 (2d Cir. 1991); Heyward v. Costello, 91 Civ. 1570, 1994 WL 263426 at *3-4 (S.D.N.Y. June 13, 1994); People v. McDonald, 1 N.Y.3d 109, 115, 769 N.Y.S.2d 781, 785 (2003).

(S.D.N.Y. Oct. 26, 1999) (Peck, M.J) (internal quotations omitted). At the plea allocution, Brown stated that no one had "threatened [him] or influenced or forced [him] in any way" to plead guilty. (P. 12; see page 3 above.) This statement directly contradicts Brown's claim that he was induced to plead guilty by any alleged threats about what the prosecutor in New York would tell the Georgia prosecutor to do.

Brown's claim that he pled guilty based on his attorney's failure to advise him that his firearm sentence would be consecutive is contradicted by his plea allocution statement that he understood that "if [his] attorney or anyone ha[d] attempted to predict to [him] what [his] sentence will be that their [prediction] could be wrong." (P. 11; see page 2 above.) Judge Cote explicitly informed Brown that his five year sentence on the firearm count would be consecutive to his sentence on Count One. (See page 3 above.) Brown understood that he faced 267 to 327 months on Count One of his New York case – significantly longer than he faced on his remaining Georgia sentence (see page 5 above) – and that the gun charge would follow (see page 3 above). Had he received any promise from counsel as to the interplay of his New York and Georgia sentences, he should have said so when asked if any threats or promises influenced him to plead guilty. (See page 3 above.) Finally, as to his guilt of the gun count, Brown admitted in his allocution that he possessed a gun to assist in his drug distribution activity. (P. 15; see page 4 above.) That statement, like all statements in his plea allocution, carries a strong presumption of verity, and it relieved the prosecution of the need to prove his possession of a gun. In short, Brown's statements at his plea allocution control over his current, conclusory statements that counsel was ineffective. Brown's plea colloquy made clear that he understood the consequences of pleading guilty and was making a voluntary and intelligent choice to do so rather than go to trial. Finally, Brown benefitted significantly from the plea – although he faced a guideline sentence of 267 to 327 months plus 60 additional months on the gun charge, Judge Owen sentenced Brown to only 200 months plus 60 additional months on the gun charge for a total of 260 months. (See page 5 above.)

Brown's claims of ineffective assistance of counsel in connection with his guilty plea are conclusory, contradicted by the record, unsupported by evidence and therefore are meritless. See, e.g., Okupe v. United States, No. 08 CV 693, 2009 WL 455289 at *2 (E.D.N.Y. Feb. 23, 2009) (§ 2255 waiver upheld where petitioner signed plea agreement, and at plea "he stated that he read, understood and discussed the agreement with his lawyer" and understood the waiver); Isaza v. United States, 04 Civ. 6096, 00 Cr. 979, 2008 WL 1849170 at *4 (S.D.N.Y. Apr. 24, 2008) (Petitioner "does not allege, however, that she received ineffective assistance of counsel in connection with the negotiation of, or her decision to enter into, the plea agreement. Nor does [petitioner] generally allege that, but for counsel's ineffective assistance, she would not have pled guilty or signed her plea agreement. For that reason, [petitioner's] waiver of her right to appeal or collaterally attack her sentence applies to her ineffective assistance of counsel claims. . . .") (citation omitted); Chen v. United States, 06 Civ. 7159, 02 Cr. 1039, 2007 WL 4358466 at *3 (S.D.N.Y. Dec. 7, 2007) (§ 2255 waiver upheld where the "record clearly establishes that [petitioner] entered into the plea agreement knowingly and voluntarily. . . . Because [petitioner's] sworn statements [at plea and sentencing] directly contradict[ed] his more recent self-serving allegations, his ineffective assistance claim is dismissed."); Cusano v. United States, 05 Civ. 7177, 2007 WL 4142771 at *2 (S.D.N.Y. Nov. 16, 2007) (§ 2255 waiver upheld and ineffective counsel claims found to be meritless when contradicted by petitioner's statements at plea allocution that he understood plea agreement, was satisfied with counsel's representation and admitted to the elements of the crime.); Villar v. United States, 05 Civ. 3230, 03 Cr. 1136, 2006 WL 44015 at *6 (S.D.N.Y. Jan 6, 2006) (§ 2255 waiver upheld and ineffective counsel claim found meritless when directly contradicted by petitioner's statements at plea allocution.); Rosario v. United States, 348 F. Supp. 2d 288, 293 (S.D.N.Y. 2004) (§ 2255 waiver upheld and claims of ineffective assistance of counsel found meritless when contradicted by statements at plea allocution.). Brown's waiver of his right to appeal or collaterally challenge any sentence less than 387 months was made knowingly and voluntarily. See, e.g., United States v. Monzon, 359 F. 3d 110, 119 (2d Cir. 2004) ("[I]f the record . . . shows that [the] claim [of ineffective assistance of counsel] lacks merit, the appeal should be dismissed because the waiver should be enforced."); see also cases cited at pages 19-20 above. Because Brown knowingly and voluntarily waived his right to appeal or collaterally attack any sentence below 387 months and Judge Owen sentenced Brown to 260 months, Brown's claims all are barred.<sup>18/</sup>

<sup>18/</sup> Because his claims are without merit, the Court denies Brown's application for appointment of counsel.

For the reasons set forth above, Brown's petition under 28 U.S.C. § 2255 to vacate, set aside, or correct his sentence of 260 months imprisonment is DENIED.<sup>19/</sup>
